

Short Bio

Daniela Waldburger studied Social Anthropology, African Linguistics and General Linguistics at the University of Zurich and holds a PhD in African Studies from the University of Vienna. She has done research in Tanzania (both mainland and Zanzibar), Kenya and Marseille. She is Senior Lecturer (50%) for Swahili at the Department of African Studies at the University of Vienna and beside Swahili also teaches courses on Applied Linguistics. In addition she holds a 50% Post Doc position at the same department in the research project „Employment-tied Housing in (post)colonial Africa“, where she is working on the case study of Lubumbashi (DR Congo).

Her research interests are Non-Standard Varieties of Swahili, Swahili and Societies, Swahili Second Language Acquisition and Discourse Analysis, Sociolinguistics, Plurilingualism/ transnational language use, Language and power, Language and history, Swahili language and literature and Employment-tied housing in (post)-colonial Africa: Lubumbashi (DR Congo) .